Leads Corps British Commons Backs Premier On Government's Foreign Policy

LONDON, Dec. 8.—(CP)—In fighting mood today, Prime Minister Churchill defended Britain's intervention in Greece and Italy—and won a resounding 279-30 vote of confidence from the House of Commons.

The 17-year-old leader received his ninth vote of confidence after declaring that Britain had acted in Greece only to avert gangster rule. He stood by the British government's position to Count Carlo Sforza, whom the United States has supported in the Italian government crisis.

His ire aroused by bitter, left-wing denunciations of his stand, Mr. Churchill himself demanded the vote of confidence as justification for continuance of his policy.

The house gave him that support, said such action would mean that Britain "will persist in this policy of clearing Athens and the Albania region of all those who are rebels to the constituted authority in Greece."

He made it abundantly clear that the policy was not designed for Greece alone; that Britain had committed itself to the right of people to choose their government in a free election, but that it would not tolerate a "gang of men from the mountains" overthrowing constitutional authority by violence.

Completes Tour Seriousness of War Situation Is Stressed by Canadian Premier

OTTAWA, Dec. 8.—The administration of Prime Minister Mackenzie King early this morning won a vote of confidence in the House of Commons. The vote was 113 for the motion and 70 against.

The vote was on a motion by the Prime Minister that the House declare it would aid the government in maintaining a vigorous war effort. The motion was originally presented by Mr. King read that the House "will aid the government in its policy of maintaining a vigorous war effort."

Just before the vote Mr. King accepted a CCF amendment striking out reference to the government's policy. On division the amendment was supported 141 to 70.

Previously Mr. King had made clear that he would consider the vote on the motion one of confidence in the government's war effort.

Vote Culmination of Discussion
The vote which came shortly after 11 p.m., MDT, was the culmination of discussion of the government order-in-council of Nov. 22 under which authority was given to send 16,000 home defense army corps overseas to the European and Mediterranean theatres of war.

Mr. King, closing the debate, spoke in serious tones of the significance of his motion, and of the course of the war.

"Anyone who has the knowledge that I have about the seriousness of the situation at this moment—seriousness which can hardly be imagined—would want to have the support of this House while carrying on the war effort," he said.

Can't Imagine What War Is Like
"Members of this House can't imagine what this war is like or what it may lead to."

He thanked Mr. J. Caldwell, CCF leader, for his effort to make it clear to the men overseas, to other nations and to the enemy that the House was determined to have Canada pursue a vigorous war effort.

The motion did not in any way call for an expression of confidence in the government and Mr. Caldwell, in moving the CCF amendment, had made it clear he did not agree with all the government's policies.

"All that we are now asking for is that a vigorous war effort be maintained," he said. "It cannot be maintained without the support—and good support—from this House of Commons."

Sharp Criticism of Tory Stand
The Prime Minister had sharp criticism for the stand taken by the Progressive Conservatives, and spoke of Gordon Graydon, Progressive Conservative house leader, as having given an address devoted largely to party politics.

"The Tory party is defeated beyond all shadow of doubt," he said. "We are not concerned tonight about the Tory party or about any other party. But we are concerned with the war effort."

House Jubilant As King Wins Confidence Vote

OTTAWA, Dec. 8.—(CP)—Members of parliament acted like schoolboys at a graduation day when the House of Commons today voted to support the government's foreign policy.

When the confidence vote was announced—143 to 70 in favor of the government—some members threw their papers into the air.

The last time the House voted in such a manner was in 1935, when it rejected the government's foreign policy.

When the vote was announced, there was a tremendous din of applause.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King, sitting with his wife in one gallery, turned to her with a broad smile.

Col. J. A. Balson, former defence minister, remained serious-faced during the celebration.

Four Children Lose Lives When Home Destroyed

Four children, members of the family of a Canadian Army serviceman, perished in the flames that destroyed their home at Dapp, about 50 miles north of Edmonton, on Thursday night, according to RCMP.

The dead children were said by police to be Irene Plasse, six years old; Helen, four; William, two; and Ronald, one.

Mother of the children was said by police to have been visiting with neighbors, only a few hundred yards from the house, when the fire broke out about 9 p.m.

STOVE LIGHTED
A small stove had been lighted before the fire, and, upon returning, Mrs. Plasse found the place in flames. She was prevented from entering the burning dwelling to save any of the children, because of the flames. The building was razed in about half an hour.

RCMP from the Westlock detachment began an investigation, and a coroner was notified. An inquest likely will be held, it was stated.

The Plasse family resided on a farm in the Dapp district, while the father is at present stationed at Delbert, N.S. Dapp is northeast of Westlock.

Manning Says: Alberta Plans To Build Plant To Test Tar Sands

The Alberta government in conjunction with Oil Sands Ltd., Edmonton, will build immediately a $250,000 test plant to determine the best method for extraction of oil products from Athabasca tar sands, it was announced Friday by Premier Ernest Manning.

The plant will be completed and in operation within a year.

Under agreement between the government and the company, Oil Sands Ltd., will build the plant and within 18 months will pay for the government at the original investment of $250,000.

At the same time, the company will be operating under supervision of a three-man board, two cabinet ministers and a company appointee, and its facilities will be available to other companies for experimental purposes.

The location at Bitumtsburg was indicated after extensive research this summer by Dr. K. A. Clark, director of an expert technical staff.

Construction of the pilot plant was authorized at the 1944 session of the legislature in June.

The plant is located about 10 miles north of Edmonton, on the Athabasca river.

Under agreement, commenting on decision of the government to build the plant, the company will be available to the government for experimental purposes.

Churchill Wins Resounding New Confidence Vote in House

British ambassador to the United States government had achieved an understanding on the Greek and Italian issues—without defining the "understanding" further.

FIGHTING GOES ON
Fighting between the British and Italian troops was continuing in Athens even as Mr. Churchill spoke.

Before the debate ended, Foreign Secretary Eden reiterated it was the government's purpose "to enable the Greek people to express their wish and decision, but be assured, we must insist that the expression should be through the ballot box and not by the bomb."

Even before the vote, Mr. Churchill appeared sure of a decisive majority. Arthur de Gaulle, leader of the Labor opposition, announced he would not vote against the government.

Mr. Greenwood objected, however, to the demand that the Greek people's will be expressed by the ballot box, "by implication to give the impression that there is a week's respite before the intervention as an instrument of policy," and maintained that "every armed element in Greece to what ever extent of the Greek nation to keep quarters out of power and had intervened in Italy because she did not trust Carlo Sforza."

In a heated debate, Mr. Churchill denied that his government had broken any joint agreements with the United States on Italy.

Mr. Churchill bluntly declared Britain would not stand for a gang of men from the mountains overthrowing constitutional authority by violence in Greece.

PERSIST IN POLICE
Ascertaining British troops had not left left-wingers there, he challenged.

"If I am to blame for this action I will gladly accept dismissal of the House, but if I am not dismissed, make no mistake about it we shall persist in this policy of clearing Athens and the Athens regions of all those who are guilty of the Greek suppression of Greece."

INDEPENDENT VIEW
Predicting his government would not be dismissed "by this largely servile house," Tom Driberg, independent, declared, "the only way we know where we are going, I think he is going against world opinion."

Mr. Driberg, who spoke after the prime minister finished, told the House that his government had an unwelcome policy of blackmail in bringing out this sort of a challenge.

Mr. Churchill repeated British troops would not be sent to Greece.

objections to Sforza by declaring: "We do not trust the man nor would we trust a cabinet confidence in any government of which he is a member."

SFORZA INTRIGUES
When Sforza returned to Italy from Sicily, Mr. Churchill said, "I am sure that the government of Premier Marshall has been assured by the director of the armed struggle, but immediately began a series of intrigues against the British."

The Prime Minister stated that Italy had been a series of intrigues under British troops' intervention in Belgium.

Under orders of Gen. Eisenhower, British troops were sent to Brussels and prevented a November coup to destroy the Greek government and Gen. Eisenhower's troops were also sent to Brussels.

Mr. Churchill's statement about Count Sforza and Italy brought shouts of "De Gaulle" from the House.

The Prime Minister replied: "I certainly never felt about de Gaulle the sentiments which experience has engendered in me about Count Sforza. De Gaulle is a man of whom I have never broken his word."

Isolated 200 paratroopers in an area between two American airfields on the eastern side of the island, some were killed.

By the Ormoc landings, Gen. MacArthur said, "We have seized the centre of the Yamashita line from the rear and have split the enemy's force in two."

Enemy planes which had been flying over the island were driven out of the sky.

The American forces when attacked the convoys. Besides four big transport ships, seven destroyers and seven destroyers were destroyed.

VESSELS SUNK
All the enemy ships were sunk before reaching Ormoc. Headquarters estimated 4,000 Japanese troops were down, making 30,000 lost in recent attacks to run reinforcements into Ormoc. The United States said the Japanese had been beached and started moving northward.

The enemy paratroopers were landed near San Pablo, about half way between Cuyayan and Burauen, airstrips from which American planes have been operating.

Two United States ships, a destroyer and a small transport, were hit so badly by aerial torpedoes that they had to be sunk by American fire. Their crews were transferred to other ships.

Only one ship was replaced by a free vote of the people, he asserted.

AIDED GERMANS
While declaring it would be his duty to help the Germans, all the ELAS army of the left wing EAM party as well-seeking, Churchill said they "did not on occasions help the German cause."

Mr. Churchill asserted that the British army invaded Greece "at the invitation and with the consent of all parties, bearing with it the assurance of the absolute right to determine their own future."

"We do not feel it compatible with our obligations to the world to which we have endeavored to help," he said, "to wash our hands of the whole business, make our way to the sea as we easily could and leave the Greeks to suffer the misery following by murder."

LABOR CHARGE
One Labor member charged that Mr. Churchill once supported Mussolini, and others bringing in the name of Spain's Gen. Franco.

Swinging at the mention of Mussolini, the Prime Minister replied: "In 1938 I certainly did support him in the sense of making speeches to say that it was a very good thing that Italy was not plunged into Bolshevism."

Mr. Churchill was greeted by wild cheering from the Conservatives when he declared "democracy is no harder to be picked up in the street by a man with a lantern."

"We stand upon the foundation of a fair and free election based upon universal suffrage," said the Prime Minister. "I feel quite different about a pseudo-democracy which takes all sorts to make a democracy, not only a left wing or even communists."

MUST MAKE SURE
Mr. Churchill said he trusted the mass of the people in almost every crisis, but that he wanted first "to make sure that it is the people not a gang of men from the mountains or countryside who pick by violence their own representatives."

U.S. 3rd Army Troops Reach Saarbrücken

upper Rhine and 10 miles north of Strasbourg, where the German army recently had been ferrying troops across the Rhine.

At the other end of the front, the American First Army plied captured from the Indian area within a half mile of Pflieger five miles from the Saar river on which the German based their defenses of the German were abandoned.

German propagandists already were preparing the German people for the loss of the great Saar region, which provided 7,000,000 tons of coal and 10 per cent of the Reich's iron and steel for the Nazi war machine last year.

With Lt. Gen. George S. Patton's tanks and infantry eight to 10 miles from the Saar, the cost miles already had been captured and a German front reporter indicated that a number of the armistice furnaces and war factories also had been abandoned.

ARMIES REGROUP
Nazi broadcasts also reported that the American First and Ninth Armies on the Cologne plain were regrouping for imminent large scale attempts to break across the Roer river into the immediate Cologne area.

At the southern end of the front, the U.S. Sixth Army group, pushed through the eastern tip of France within four miles of the Siegfried line and advanced within four miles of Colmar, the strategic German pocket on the Alsace plain.

Patton's troops broke into the Siegfried line and a half the face of savage resistance in the Pachtner Bach, and forced four miles north of Saarbrücken.

ENTER SUBURBS
Other Third Army troops cracked into the west bank suburbs of Saarbrücken, on the east bank of the Saar river, after capturing Furstentum, three and a half miles west of the industrial center.

Other columns were within four miles southwest of Saarbrücken at Forbach and six miles south of it at Volkmann. American artillery hurled their shells into Saarbrücken for the eighth straight day and fire could be seen burning inside the city, capital of the largest industrial center in the Saar basin.

First word that the Germans were writing off the Saar basin came from Lt. Gen. Alexander C. McLeod, a German war reporter, as writing that the area's melting factories, furnaces and mines "were humming with work until the very last moment."

"COMPELLED TO LEAVE"
"Now Saarland is being compelled to leave since they are caught between the fire of the advancing enemy and the west wall behind them," he said. "They realize that the area's destruction and devastation has come to neighboring towns, now must evacuate their own homes."

On the Third Army's southern flank, Lt. Gen. Alexander C. Patton's American Seventh Army pushed to within seven miles of the Saar river, either side of the Harst mountain in the eastern tip of France.

The Seventh Army drive carried through Montbronn, three and a half miles south of the German stronghold of Reibach and into Koenigsberg, a mile and a half farther, he said there was a counter attack.

The Germans continued their violent resistance at Haguenau, another stronghold southeast of Reibach, after driving the Americans from the northern half of Metz, a six miles northwest of Haguenau, in a counter attack.

Stay Out of the Jam

The superintendent of the street railway makes the reasonable suggestion that every timely request that where at all possible people do their travelling by street car or bus between the hours of 10 a.m. and 4 p.m.
They are the "rush" hours of the day.

Those who comply with this request will thereby confer a favor on those who have to use the cars to get to and from work in the morning and evening hours, and motorists and conductresses, and also on themselves. The cars are crowded during the rush hours, and the point of actual standing "room" would be a luxury.

For the next couple of weeks the congestion will be made worse than usual because many and perhaps most of the singers will be coming to town in loads of parcels, parcels which they will be particularly anxious not to be crushed. At best the one-hour traffic is going to take on something of the nature of a melee around the time the stores, shops and offices close.

The laggard shopper who chooses to delay the homeward journey until the carparks starts is bound to have an interesting but uncomfortable and exasperat-ing ride, besides making it more difficult for the hungry clerk and other down town workers who want to get home.

The kindly thing to do and also the sensible thing is, in national eye to grind, to make the shopping or visiting trip in the mid-day period, leaving the cars and busses in the rush hours for the "must" passengers.

A Service for Canada

Senator T. D. Bouchard of Quebec is performing an excellent service for Canadian unity in his various speaking engagements across the country.

Addressing the Canadian Club in Regina, he stated flatly that the great majority of French-Canadians are, like himself, opposed to a Canada alienated from the United States, and that he would support a separate Quebec state.

It is something new and something valuable to find a French-Canadian of this type who is so highly articulate.

Hitherto, the articulate section of Quebec people has been composed of the intellectuals, the fanatics and those groups which have an organized policy to grind.
Consequently, many Canadians have formed their opinion of French Canada from this class, and it is a very unfortunate error, as Senator Bouchard's speech is based on the vociferous mouthings of a fantastic minority.

As the Bulletin has pointed out, time and time again, the little racial difference between French-speaking Canada and English-speaking Canadians.
Both are of Celtic-Norman stock.

There is no reason why they should not get together and stay together provided they repudiate those agencies, to which Senator Bouchard refers, which are bent on causing dissension for their own purposes.

Compulsory Voting

Few Canadians will agree with President Walter G. Attridge of the Junior Chamber of Commerce of Canada that compulsory voting should be made effective in Canada.

The Junior Chambers in most Canadian cities, including Edmonton, are doing magnificent piece of work in seeking to arouse greater popular interest in public affairs. Their efforts to bring out a larger vote in all elections are useful and effective.

But it would be much better if they would continue along the line of persuasion and education rather than moving their efforts by support of a compulsory voting measure.

The Junior Chambers are trying to effect the greater interest in the affairs of government. This can only be done by instruction, certainly not by force.

An indifferent voter is, for anything, no vote at all. For a vote is a potent instrument. It affects the lives of millions of people. It moves money and power between heaven and plenty, life and death. And no vote of that kind should be forced into a ballot box under threat of a jail sentence or fine.

The Junior Chambers of Commerce are doing an invaluable job in drawing out a greater voluntary vote. It is bound to be more and tedious work. But they would do well to stick to it.

All in Six Months

Just in case the reader has not looked up the map—the drive of General Patton's forces into the Saar area is being made from Lorraine, where German province have been cleared of the enemy.

The Nazis are now reported to be getting out of all parts of the adjoining German area of Alsace, where pressing out of position.

able. When the last of them have crossed the Rhine or have been rounded up, French soil will be entirely free of the invaders save for a few parts on the Channel and Bay of Biscay coasts where Nazi garrisons are being left to starve or surrender as and when they choose.

It is only a little more than six months since 1941. Even now, the British and German never lost more territory in the same space of time. And this particular territory had been fortified as no other country had before.

If there is any tendency to be impatient because the Allied armies did not rush the Siegfried line and sweep into the Reich, the cure is to recall what they have accomplished since mid-summer, and against what obstacles. The sweep of Hitler's armored forces across unprepared France leaves no comparison, as a military feat, to the counter-blow which sent them scuttling for home.

Try Him in England

For the sake of the man himself and for the sake of those millions who enjoy the company of G. W. Woodhouse, the hump-backed novelist, should be taken to England and given a fair trial without delay.

For years we have heard vaguely about his alleged collaboration with the Germans after he was caught in France in the tide of the invasion, and carried off to Germany.

For years we were told that he made broadcasts for the Nazis and appeared to espouse their cause. He has denied all this categorically and declares that his broadcasts were perfectly innocent and intended to reassure his friends at home.

Now, Woodhouse, free of the Germans in Paris. He has been arrested, freed and sentenced to a year in prison. He has been tried within the British meaning of a trial.
Surely this is not good enough. The man has afforded pleasure to millions of English-speaking people, and his name should be definitely and permanently blackened.
Only a trial under English law will effect that purpose.

Losing the Far Politically

Power Blocs in Europe

European militarily, and losing it politically, by failing to read the signs of the times.

We shall lose the war politically if the Anglo-American-British-Russian co-

The Revolt Against Tariffs

By BRUCE HUTCHISON

The high-tariff policy of the United States, as originally urged by Hamilton, is generally inclined to protection—the small manufacturer, who by the nature of his business is inclined to production methods and, therefore, fears the competition of low-wage countries.

It is on the prosperity of heavy, mass-production industries that the American people have based their economic life. The protection of these industries is essential to the welfare of the country.

Full Employment for Everyone

By ELMORE PHILLIPS in the Full employment for everyone for all political programs after the war. That is a fine thing. In sim-

Canadian National Railway To Again Have Line Tested

MONTREAL, Dec. 8.—N. E. Watson, C.N.R. executive vice-president of the Canadian National Railways, announced today that the CNR will renew its contract with the Sherrill Company to have their rail detector cars travel over 14,732 miles of track during 1962. The work of these cars, which scan electrically operated mechanisms, is to discover faults in steel rail not discernible to the human eye. In operation they move slowly along the track and when a flaw is discovered the mechanism records it on a chart and marks the rail with a dab of white paint. The defective rail is immediately replaced.

Western Company To Be Part of Moore Business Forms

Western Sales Book Company Ltd., of Winnipeg and Vancouver, and eight other subsidiary companies of Moore Corporation Ltd. will be united January 1, to form Moore Business Forms, which will be the world's largest designer and producer of business system forms. R. G. R. Govan, General Manager of the Western company, announced today.

R. G. R. GOVAN

The company, which designs and manufactures continuous business forms, autographic register paper, carbon paper and counter sales books, was established in 1906 and became part of Moore Corporation in 1928. As the Western Sales Book division of Moore Business Forms, Ltd., it will continue to conduct its business independently of the other divisions, adapting its policies to its own field of operations, but it will draw upon the central headquarters for special services in research, engineering, production and marketing. Mr. Govan, who has been with the company for 21 years, will continue as General Manager.

The consolidation, Mr. Govan said, "of our several subsidiaries with different names into one national organization with the single name Moore Business Forms, which sells United States and Canadian forms more adequately describe our business and products and provide a closer tie-up of all our operations so that our customers may realize and benefit from the nationwide service which we can give. No change in ownership or policy is involved."

An explanation of the reorganization was made to employees of the local company, and simultaneously to the employees of the other companies in the Moore organization by E. G. Baker, president of the parent company, Corporation Ltd., Toronto, through the medium of a sound motion picture produced especially for the purpose. He told the 6,500 employees in Canada and the United States that the company will sponsor a campaign of national advertising to both Canada and United States publications and that within the next three years it will invest several million dollars in new equipment. He also announced the immediate creation of a southern division with headquarters in Dallas, Texas, where temporary premises have been leased and where a modern plant will be erected as soon as materials are available.

In addition to the Western Sales Book Company, Western Business Forms Ltd., of Toronto, and National Sales Check Book Co. Ltd., of Montreal, will be divisions of Moore Business Forms Ltd. Moore Business Forms, Inc., in the United States, will include the following companies as divisions: Cady-Worth Manufacturing Book Company, Minneapolis; American Sales Book Company, Niagara Falls and El Paso, N.Y.; and Columbia Eastern Corporation, Niagara Falls, which will be continued in one division, Pacific Manufacturing Book Company, of Emeryville and Los Angeles, Calif.; Southern Business Systems, Inc., of Orlando, Florida; and Moore Research and Service Company, Inc., of Niagara Falls, N.Y.

A Canadian organization with 1,000 stockholders, Moore Corporation, which grew out of a small business started in Toronto 60 years ago by S. J. Moore, now chairman of the board, will own all the stock of both the United States and Canadian companies. Mr. Moore will be chairman of the new companies. Mr. Baker will be president, and W. N. McDonald, executive vice-president.

Companies that will continue as part of Moore Ltd. are: The Sherrill Company, which designs and produces forms; F. N. Bell Company, Buffalo, and the Dominion Paper Box Company, Toronto, which together produce a large part of the small forms used in commercial and industrial, and the Kodak Press Company, Dover, New Hampshire, which builds most of the special equipment for the Moore company.

Mr. R. E. Lloyd is the Western company's sales manager for Alberta with headquarters in the Moore Building here.

Back Injuries Caused Death Of Young Girl

A coroner's jury, Friday, inquiring into the death of 16-year-old Joan McPherson, found she had died as a result of being struck by an auto operated by Peter Gushko of Wainwright, death being caused by spinal injuries.

The jury, in a rider, admitted that the streets had been in bad condition, but expressed the belief that all drivers should exercise more care and judgment when operating cars under these conditions.

Seven witnesses gave evidence in the hearing which lasted for almost two hours. A. W. Albright, city garage, told of examining the auto and finding the mechanical condition excellent; brakes were 90 per cent efficient, lights 100 per cent; all evidence that recent work had been done on the vehicle to maintain its efficiency.

Recent markings on the car included a torn and bent right running board, a major dent in the right fender.

STREET "TERRIBLE"

Donald Thibert told the jury of seeing the car going north along 37 street at 108 a.m., when it started to skid. At the same time he saw the girl standing in the road. The street, he said, "was terrible, all ice. There was not a chance for the car to miss the girl." He estimated the speed of the auto at 15 miles an hour, he said.

Mrs. Theresa Bieler told the jury she saw the girl take three steps into the street just after noticing the car begin a skid.

"The car overrode around the front wheel going over the girl. A woman behind me screamed and I looked behind. When I turned back, the rear wheels of the car were on the sidewalk."

Mary Rizzio stated she had observed the car going in a circle and "something" striking the post. Going to the scene she found the girl on the sidewalk and thought she had hit the girl with the streetcar stop-sign on it.

Constable Ed. MacNeil said the girl was being removed in a patrol car by two other officers, when he arrived at the scene of the accident. He interviewed Gushko, driver of the car, which at that time stood 15 feet eight inches north of the sign-post.

Fragments found on the right fender of the car were removed and taken to the provincial analyst, equipped the officers. Analysis showed the fragments to be human flesh.

BATTLE OF WORDS

Thibert's recall to the witness stand precipitated a wordy battle between W. J. Shortreed, who conducted proceedings, and A. Frazer Duncan, K.C., counsel for Gushko. Thibert's statement to city police at the time of the accident, did not agree with the testimony offered at the inquiry, Mr. Shortreed contended.

The latter, when it was suggested his memory was not good, replied that it was quite good.

Dr. E. A. Braithwaite, chief coroner, told the jury, as a medical man, that the girl's death was caused by a fractured spine and separation of the spinal cord. Peter Gushko, presently charged with manslaughter, was not called to give evidence.

Members of the jury were J. W. Talbot, foreman; R. J. Talbot, W. H. Halliburton, John Norington and E. W. Armstrong.

French-Canadian Draftees Return To Quebec Camps

QUEBEC, Dec. 9.—(CP)—Nearly 1,000 French-Canadian members of the home defence (NDMA) army arrived here yesterday at military camps at nearby Quebec and Montserrat ending for some a six-day trip from the West coast. All additional members of the home defence army were expected to arrive Friday in Military District No. 5.

Maj. J. P. Paquet of Quebec led the 24th Light Anti-Aircraft Regiment into Valcartier camp, while Major Lionel Lafrance of Montreal led the 15th Field company of the Royal Canadian Engineers into Montserrat. Men of both units will be asked to volunteer for active service.

The 15th Field Company has been stationed at Chilliwack, B.C., and the anti-aircraft regiment at Shilo, Man.

Canadian organization with 1,000 stockholders, Moore Corporation, which grew out of a small business started in Toronto 60 years ago by S. J. Moore, now chairman of the board, will own all the stock of both the United States and Canadian companies. Mr. Moore will be chairman of the new companies. Mr. Baker will be president, and W. N. Graydon Says Liberals, CCF Heal "Breach"

OTTAWA, Dec. 8.—(CP)—Graydon, CCF leader, said last night in the closing stages of the debate on the government's confidence motion in the Commons that there had been a "breach" in the confidence of the Liberal and CCF parties.

Earlier, M. J. Coldwell, CCF leader, said that a Progressive Conservative motion to the government motion was not in line with the attitude indicated by Mr. Graydon in a speech which he made last night in the Commons.

Mr. Graydon said the amendment finally presented, and defeated in the House yesterday afternoon, was "all fours" with the one he had announced in general terms he would make when the special sitting opened.

Mr. Graydon said Mr. Coldwell had been "pretty bitter" to us in his speech and "his tone and his words have contained more bitterness than we can afford to indulge in at this time."

Mr. Coldwell last night moved a motion of confidence in the government, which would support the government in maintaining its policy of a "policy" of "policy."

Mr. Coldwell moved that mention of "policy" should be eliminated from the motion, and he asked to declare it supported vigorously.

Mr. Coldwell said that the Prime Minister Mackenzie King said he was prepared to accept the amendment.

Prospecting in Canada

By ROBERT C. STANLEY

Chairman and President
The International Nickel Company of Canada, Limited

To ignore the present warning resulting from the increased mining of "wasting assets" is definitely dangerous. If Canada's established position in world mining is to be maintained, it is imperative that steps be initiated now for more positive encouragement of prospecting. Greater rewards must be offered to prospectors, government tax and other regulations must be revised to give them more liberal treatment, increased aid and support must be forthcoming from governmental agencies, mining companies and individuals, and the encouragement of prospecting should be a part of the rehabilitation program for returned service men.

It is not generally realized how few prospectors are in the field. From information at hand it is probable that not more than a few hundred were in the field throughout Canada last season, and these, mostly older men, represented practically all the available prospectors.

Many of the successful prospectors have made their state and have retired, but unfortunately they did not train younger men to take their places. Now have they stressed to youths this national necessity or the opportunities that the occupation offers.

The decline of prospecting and lack of its lure may be attributed to several factors. Many prospectors feel they cannot take their "finds" to the large mining companies, and there is a tendency to feel that they do not get a fair deal. They are forced, therefore, to finance their development either through a small syndicate or a stock company. Measures should be taken to remedy this situation. If it exists, or corrects the impression if it amounts to no more than that.

ASSURE REWARD
Basically the motive and driving force that pushes a man into the hazardous of prospecting are the chances of one big stake. It should be perfectly clear, therefore, that if prospectors are to be hired or encouraged, they must be assured of a substantial reward. The exact amount or the method of paying remuneration can, of course, be subject to negotiation, but the principle must be substantial.

The prospector is perfectly well-to-gamble and to wait until he has a chance. He is usually ready to follow his interest to his last dollar, but he is not usually ready to take up a job that turns out, or to be turned down if it is a dud. He is not usually ready to be assured of getting his portion if his find makes it. It must be remembered that the season for prospecting in Canada each year is a short one, running from four to six months dependent on the location of the property.

MAIN ATTRACTION
Gold, of course, is still the main attraction of the prospector. Most of the old time men were aware of the value of base metals and sought them in, when found. The lure of gold, however, has kept many prospecting away from the base metal areas.

New gold discoveries have been made in the vicinity of the old camps and there has been a renewed interest in base metal since the discovery of Noranda in 1932. Geological and exploration agencies generally feel that it is not because the ore bodies are not there, but that they are due to a lack of the old time pick and shovel prospecting.

It is highly desirable that this kind of man return to prospecting. He is essentially a lone wolf. He may have a partner, but generally he is generally a lone wolf since he inherently dislikes syndicates or groups.

The return of men from the armed forces and from overseas should afford an excellent opportunity to get new blood into prospecting. The problem will be to secure the right man, train them for the job and make the prospecting attractive by offering real incentive.

EDUCATIONAL PROGRAM
To educate and train the returning young men into the business, the initiation of a well-organized educational program by the Prospector and Developers Association, backed by government departments, aided financially by the mining companies, both large and small, and helped by any other organizations, would be in order. The Department of Mines this winter with special invitation to returned service men, has announced by the Ontario board of the operation of a school at which can be secured of the Halesbury Mining Institute to train returned members of the armed services in mining, are steps in the right direction.

If the attempt is made to minimize or eliminate the element of risk in prospecting, the element could well be failure. It is that danger that made it a game, and it has and should have large mines and mining camps. In many cases the past the prospector has been backed by the lawyer, the doctor or the merchant, and the present stage has been financed by the public through the broker and the stock market. The mining companies, admittedly spending that much on publicity, should not actively withhold taking too many chances with their shareholders' money and this, of course, is in one form or another. Restrictions on present trends should be modified to pick out the wheat from the chaff, thus not only permitting the encouraging training in prospecting and development. If every one had always played 100 per cent safe, it is certain there would be few large mines today.

The crux of the situation is to initiate and maintain proper restrictions so as to discourage unscrupulous promotions but to make legitimate prospecting attractive by holding out the same time to make it seem that it gets to the proper person. If prospecting is made sufficiently appealing the right kind of men will undoubtedly take up the occupation.

The Prospector and Developers Association has helped the cause and this has been done with very little money. They certainly know what the problems are and have some of the answers, but their work cannot continue without financial help. The interest of the nation and of prospecting, the mining companies, and the government should contribute to the plan proposed by the Association.

The Dominion and provincial governments can help the situation in the following ways:
1.—By providing classes at the demobilization and rehabilitation centers to instruct the interested men and by providing an information service so that returned men can learn of the nature and attractiveness of the work.

2.—By continuing assistance in supplying speakers and teachers to the classes sponsored by the Prospector and Developers Association at meetings throughout Canada.

3.—By expanding certain departments so that preliminary work in good and useful form are available to the prospectors. These should be made in conjunction with the Forestry Branch, giving all available information concerning travel routes and conditions, and even if only topographic in nature, would be of great assistance if they are made available prior to their use.

4.—By providing a Forestry Branch planes the transportation of men and supplies, and combined with the usual fire patrol work. The Forestry Branch can further assist by keeping portages in shape, by clearing marking water trails, Little of this work has been done since the advent of air navigation. The prospectors, however, are free to air, he must have ready access to the trails.

5.—By revising the tax regulations so that the employer, the established mining company or small syndicates and individuals will get some relief on money spent. This purpose, there should be, furthermore, be relief to the prospector himself, since the government derives solely from this source.

6.—By providing in Mining Research, which is the many countries, a sufficient liaison officer to assist the prospector as to travel conditions and who is supplied with copies of gold maps for distribution. The officer should be the centre of an active and up-to-date list of bulletins, maps and information, with someone in charge capable of directing and guiding the prospector.

SERIES OF PAPERS
The Canadian Institute of Mining and Metallurgy can by systematic planning provide a series of papers, which, in cooperation with the geological structure of the principal geological districts, the series can be used in the search for ore.

Prospectors should be made conscious of the value of base metals as compared with gold so that base metal areas will be gone over as carefully as the gold belts.

Companies should hire more of the prospector type—there has been too much tendency to employ men of the "red neck" type, who are not the type of men who can be trusted without the necessary pick and shovel work. These men, of course, should be guided but only to the extent of finding out the best mining areas. Let the prospector do the work, provide him with transportation and with means of communication. The company's responsibility should be to the field only when the prospector runs up something he thinks is of value.

Too much emphasis cannot be placed on the importance of prospecting for new mineral deposits now. To assure Canada a great future as a metal producer, government regulations and other conditions should be revised so that the prospector must be eliminated as soon as possible.

And finally it is my considered opinion that even if the above recommendations are all accepted and acted upon, they would be of little value, unless the Canadian government would give its attention to the wasting nature of the mining industry and make allowances to offset the inevitable loss.
